Germany Reported On Verge of Civil War

NATION GRIPPED BY REIGN OF GESTAPO TERROR

People Get First News Of Approach Of Allies In Victory Drive

NAZIS ADMIT THREATS

Hitler Appears Ready For Death Fight Rather Than Surrender

LONDON, Sept. 5—Reports reaching neutral diplomats in London were quoted by the London Daily Mail today as saying that Germany is on the verge of civil war and has been gripped by a new reign of terror launched by Heinrich Himmler's dreaded Gestapo.

According to this information, civil war may already have broken out in the Reich, which received its first news of the approach of Allied armies today in an article written by Dr. Helmut Suendermann, acting Nazi press chief.

Meanwhile, Swiss reports revealed that 2,000 men and many hundreds of women were arrested in Berlin alone during the last few days on charges of evading Adolf Hitler's new total mobilization decrees.

Suendermann writing in Der Angriff, called on the Germans to employ scorched earth tactics against the Allies in what he called a "people's war" of death and hatred.

His article was to be reprinted by the entire German press today. "No blade of grass," said Suendermann, "shall feed the enemy, no German shall give him information, no German shall help him in any way. Every path shall be destroyed, every street blockaded and only death and hatred shall meet him."

"The enemy intends to send the German people to Siberia, Africa, Australia and Alaska to break the Germans' physical strength. The 30 years' war against Germany will end with death in slavery if hard fists at home don't help us."

Admitting the possibility of the defeat of the German army on the soil of the Reich, Suendermann said: "If the army is repulsed on German soil there would be no village, house, field or hill where the aggressor would not meet a thousand-fold resistance."

"We don't want victory to annihilate the British people or to conquer America; we must win the victory so as to be able to live."

Whether or not the Germans will heed the appeal remains to be seen. But it is now clear that the Nazi leadership has decided on a fight to the finish rather than yield to the Allies, demand for unconditional surrender.

ACCORD NEAR ON RECONVERSION

Congress, Eager To Recess, Waits Impatiently For Conference Report

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—A congress eager to recess for the Fall election campaign waited impatiently today for senate and house conferees to reach agreement on postwar reconversion legislation.

Conference committee met again today to iron out differences in the house and senate versions of the George bill for industrial demobilization and the Colmer measure on government surplus property disposal.

Sen. George (D) Ga. expressed hope that an agreement could be reached this afternoon on his bill and predicted the conferees would have a report ready for the house and senate "not later than Thursday."

Rep. Manasco (D) Ala., chairman of house conferees on the surplus property bill, expressed doubt, however, that his group would have a report ready for congress before next Monday or Tuesday.

HITLER MAY BE IN WEST WITH "DARING PLAN"

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—The Berlin radio indicated today that Adolf Hitler may be on the western front and said a "daring plan" was being formulated for defense of the Reich.

The official German communique was broadcast with the date-line "from the Fuehrer's headquarters on the western front," while in respect to the defense plan Berlin said the Nazis were falling back in order to gain time for total mobilization of the home front.

STRIKERS BOO WLB, REFUSE TO MEET WAR NEED

Work On Bearings For Superfortresses Still Halted In Cleveland

PICKETS BALK RETURN

7,000 Men Remain Idle Due To Discharge Of Man For Breaking Lock

CLEVELAND, Sept. 5—Comparatively few workers passed through the concentrated picket lines today to reinforce the back-to-work movement at the plants of the Cleveland Graphite Bronze Company where production has been halted since last Thursday on bearings for the B-29 Superfortresses and other war machines.

Despite the alertness of hundreds of foot patrolmen and mounted officers, the pickets managed to persuade a large number of workers not to go into the plants as they alighted from street cars.

Disturbances of a minor nature occurred at the larger of the two plants, with a number of pickets taken into custody last night and early today.

Editor Arrested

Jerry Raymond, editor of the Mechanics Educational Society of America News, the Detroit organ of the independent union which called the strike, was taken into custody by police. He was released at the 11th precinct police station where police said he signed a waiver for creating a disturbance.

Using a loud speaker, company spokesmen called to the workers to return to their jobs. In instances where the War Labor Board was mentioned, the strikers responded with loud boos.

A woman picket was detained this morning when she slapped another woman who was trying to pass through the lines. Mount police several times were forced to charge a line of pickets blocking the gates and the authorities had to tow away a string of automobiles with which the pickets stalled and for a time successfully blocked busy St. Clair avenue.

7,000 Strikers

Not a single incident was reported as the smaller of the two plants which together employ some 7,000 workers.

The reopening of the plants was considered a showdown between the union and the company, backed by a War Labor Board back-to-work order.

Millions Offered For Right Of Plant Observation—Factories Study Bid

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—American manufacturers are said to be considering generous financial offers from the Russian government for long-term observation of American plants by Soviet technicians and workers.

Manufacturers anticipating sharp cutbacks are said to be somewhat tempted to accept the Soviet offer, but are thinking twice before throwing away their export trade.

They would be unable to protect their export markets through agreement with the Soviet government because of the anti-trust laws and the state department championship of free trade.

Other manufacturers have turned a frigid shoulder to the Soviet offers.

"We would be selling fifty or 100 years of experience and research for forty or fifty million dollars," a machine tool manufacturer declared. "Not only would (Continued on Page Two)

HITLER ORDERS EXECUTION OF FIELD MARSHAL

ROME, Sept. 5—Adolf Hitler personally ordered the death of Field Marshal Reichenau in 1941, a German telephone operator captured on the Italian front revealed today.

An official announcement at the time said Reichenau had died following a heart attack.

According to the operator, execution of the field marshal was ordered in Munich September 19, 1941.

Washington May Claim President's Right To Fight Undeclared War

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—The State department is preparing today to justify the right of the President of the United States to order American forces to restrain future aggressor nations without first asking congress for a declaration of war.

It was learned authoritatively that historical precedent will be cited by the administration as justification for the President's right to use American armed forces immediately to stop war as part of the proposed world security plan.

The basis of the administration's argument will be that it is no more unconstitutional for the President to order American forces to act immediately to restrain aggressor nations than it was for Thomas Jefferson to send a naval expedition to Tripoli in 1804 to wage undeclared war against the Barbary pirates.

Use of American forces to help crush the Boxer rebellion in 1900 without a declaration of war also will be cited as an example of the President's historical right to act on his own authority to help preserve peace.

Administration officials point out that 2,000 American troops participated with British, French, Russian and Japanese forces in crushing the Boxer rebellion, which lasted nine months. It is recalled that the Chinese involved in that rebellion against the foreigners were regular troops acting under the orders of the Chinese government of that time.

SEVERE SURFACE TREMOR SHAKES EAST SEABOARD

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—The eastern seaboard from Canada to Delaware and as far inland as Detroit shuddered early today during an earthquake which, without causing extensive damage or casualties, brought thousands of telephonic inquiries to police stations and newspaper offices.

The quake was recorded at the Harvard university observatory in Boston at 12:39 a. m., and, according to Dr. L. Don Leet, caused a 15-minute gap in sensitized record paper of the seismograph machine.

The tremors were felt in nearly every city and town along the coast, but in most cases, lasted for no more than two minutes.

PACIFIC FLEET ON LOOSE AGAIN

Bonin And Volcano Island Attacks May Foreshadow Important Blows

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—The Pacific fleet was on the loose again today possibly foreshadowing a series of important new moves against the Japanese.

The Navy from Pacific fleet headquarters confirmed earlier Tokyo reports that an American aircraft task force had carried out a three-day assault against the enemy's Bonin and Volcano islands.

The assault was considered significant in view of the fact there has been little carrier activity on a major scale in recent weeks. The strike against the Bonin area and Wake island may be the prelude to another series of sweeps against the enemy.

In the Southwest Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen continued their softening up raids against the southern Philippine area and enemy shipping in the East Indies.

G O P GOVERNOR SPEAK ON RADIO TUESDAY NIGHT

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—Three Republican Governors—Arthur B. Langlie of Washington, Walter E. Edge of New Jersey and Harry F. Kelly of Michigan—will speak over a national radio hookup tonight, setting the stage of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's first major campaign speech.

Dewey will speak Thursday night at Convention Hall, Philadelphia, but the trio of governors, meanwhile, will deliver addresses that Republican National Chairman Herbert Brownell, Jr., described as "frankly political."

Paris Declares Americans Have Entered Germany Near Duchy Border

100,000 HUNS TRAPPED

Sweep Across Belgium Seals Fate Of Enemy Along Coast

By International News Service

Liberation of the Netherlands was under way today. The Paris radio said American troops had occupied a German village on the border and British and Allied broadcasts claimed the Yanks were in Luxembourg itself.

Although not confirmed at the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied tank formations were said to have crashed the Dutch border and occupied the town of Breda, en route to Rotterdam.

GERMANS TRAPPED

More than 100,000 Germans were reported cut off in the coastal area west of liberated Antwerp and the Pas De Calais area in Northeastern France as the result of the sweep of British and Allied troops across Belgium. Gen. Eisenhower's communique said that Allied forces which entered Antwerp yesterday were clearing the dock area of the city.

Rome reported that the American Seventh Army, continuing its fast advance up the Saone river valley, was rolling steadily toward junction with Allied forces in Northern France, now little more than 100 miles away.

French forces have reached Macon, 38 miles north of Lyon, and Sanbonnet de Bruyeres. Rome reported, while on the east bank of the Saone the Americans have moved past Montevet, 42 miles northeast of Lyon.

Fierce fighting was reported on the Adriatic sector of the Italian front. Strong German resistance was being encountered north of the Conca river.

Near Gothic Line

Fifth Army spearheads northwest of Florence were reported near Prato and Lucca, Gothic line strongpoints.

Meantime the Eighth Army, following a battle with Nazi paratroopers, pounded through the vicinity of Abbinia and to the outskirts of Riccione Marina, some six miles from the big Adriatic seaport of Rimini, eastern anchor of the Gothic line. British destroyers shelled Rimini from off shore.

Russian troops have renewed their drive to liberate the Polish capital of Warsaw. Cracking strong Nazi defenses, the Soviets reached the Narew river, last natural barrier guarding the approaches to the city.

The Germans, was coordinated with another Russian drive on East Prussia.

The Nazis on the Robot bomb coast of France and Belgium, now trapped by the Allied drive through Brussels and Antwerp, resumed their indiscriminate attacks on Southern England and the London area following an 86-hour lull.

A powerful formation of Allied bombers streamed across the southeast coast of England, apparently for a smash at the Pas de Calais area.

The results of our past research and development have been available to Russia but the benefits of future improvements over a five or ten year period would also be theirs.

"To enter into such a transaction would be to destroy our own market abroad where superior American products are virtually unchallenged at the present time."

Another manufacturer whose firm had been approached with the same proposition by the Russians expressed some concern for the future of American export trade.

"Bombed out countries will have the opportunity to replace obsolete and inadequate equipment with the very latest of industrial machinery and techniques," he said ruefully.

"Russia, for example, is just about where the United States was in 1825—it is just about finding its feet and learning what it is all about industrially. If the United States is not careful we may find ourselves being pushed down to the other end of the slide industrially."

Funeral Service Held For Arthur Willoughby, Auto Accident Victim

Funeral was held at 2 p. m. Tuesday in Mader Chapel for Arthur Paul Willoughby, 14, of 143 East Water street, who was fatally injured late Saturday night in an automobile accident on Route 22, 5½ miles west of Circleville.

According to the report of Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious, young Willoughby suffered a crushed skull when the car driven by Perry Jenkins, 20, Circleville, went off the road and turned over. Willoughby, who was riding in the rumble seat apparently was thrown out of the car and his head crushed by a rear wheel. Pontious said the investigation of the accident was being continued.

Also injured were Robert Patnie, 17, of Columbus, and Robert Strawser, 18, of Circleville, who were treated at Berger hospital for minor injuries. Defenbaugh ambulance took the injured to the hospital.

Jenkins said he was blinded by lights of an approaching car and lost control of the auto he was driving, which belonged to Robert Woods. Jenkins and Carl Olney, another passenger in the coupe, escaped injury.

Arthur Paul Willoughby was born in Circleville Oct. 1, 1929, the son of William and Meda Emma Holcomb Willoughby. He was employed at Mader's Candy Shoppe. He was a member of the United Brethren church.

Surviving besides his parents are five sisters, Mrs. E. E. Wagner of Chillicothe, Mrs. James H. Harper and Mrs. George E. Davis of Columbus, Mrs. John Paul Crafts and Mrs. Berlin D. Ward, both of Circleville; four brothers, Clarence William and Jack, in service, Lewis and Dick, at home.

Rev. J. E. Huston of the Circleville United Brethren church was in charge of the funeral and burial was in Forest cemetery.

view of MacArthur's aerial blast and warned its listeners that an invasion of the Philippines might be carried out any time now.

The daring blow against the Bonins resulted in the destruction of 21 ships sunk or damaged. Eighty five planes were destroyed and enemy installations severely damaged.

The fact that cruisers and destroyers were in action in the three-day assault against Iwo Jima and Haha Jima demonstrated how thoroughly the Pacific fleet now dominates the vast ocean. The Bonins are approximately 500 miles southeast of Tokyo.

The fleet also demonstrated its sweeping power by striking at the same time against the Japanese held former American island of Wake.

Meanwhile, Army bombers ranged along the entire arch of Japan's defense line to blast enemy installations and shipping.

These developments and enemy broadcasts indicated the Pacific war may be entering another important stage in the Allied march westward toward the Philippines, China and Tokyo.

making progress, however, after a deadlock of several days. A tentative agreement has been reached to have a board and administrator jointly handle the disposal of an estimated 60 to 100 billion dollars in excess war materials.

The tentative program of congressional leaders calls for a recess by September 15 until probably mid-November once the two bills have been disposed of.

A possible stumbling block to adjournment is the demand in the senate from some members that the upper house enact postwar public works legislation before the election recess.

Sen. Overton (D) La. is pressing for consideration of the one billion dollar flood control bill and the 500 million dollar rivers and harbors measure, both already approved by the house. Majority Leader Barkley is reported desirous of having the senate act on the Hayden road construction bill authorizing the expenditure by the government of one billion 950 million dollars during a three-year period after the war.

TIME waits for no man

Train crews — these are the men who keep the trains rolling, day and night, in the constant battle against time. They are the railroaders who translate operational orders into swift, safe movement of vital war traffic.

Pictured here is a Norfolk and Western freight train crew. Each has his own important job to do — each must know what to do and how to do it.

The conductor is the captain of the train. He takes the orders, checks them with his crew, keeps records of the train's consist and movements, makes the final report. With strong hand on the throttle, regulating the flow of power of his mighty locomotive, the engineer must keep keen eyes alert for signals and highway grade crossings, blow whistle signals, maintain correct speeds, operate the train smoothly. His assistant, the fireman, keeps the steam up, checks the array of gauges and other instruments in the locomotive cab, double checks signals and crossings, operates the bell.

Meanwhile, in his cupola on the engine tender, the head end brakeman keeps a sharp eye on the train — always alert for any danger signal. He and the rear end brakeman — who puts up the correct signals on his caboose and looks out generally for the safety of the train — "set out" cars from their train or "cut in" strings of cars waiting on sidings; make complete train inspections at every inspection station.

With equipment second to none and the backing of their thousands of fellow employees, the highly trained, experienced Norfolk and Western train crews are keeping the trains rolling as never before — trains that have moved more ton-miles of freight, per mile of road, during the five war-years, 1939-1943, than any other railroad in the United States of 350 miles or more in length.

That's a record of which Norfolk and Western train crews — and the entire Norfolk and Western Family — are proud. For they know they are serving their country well, and helping to speed the day of Victory.

Above, conductor and engineer compare time and check orders as they prepare to start another precision run.

At right, rear brakeman places the correct signal light on the caboose as the crew moves to get the train under way.

HISTORIC JAP DEFEAT
IN the early days of our war with the Japanese they boasted of the invincibility of their fleet. The clashes with what naval power we were able to muster in the Pacific after Pearl Harbor, though reflecting great credit to our personnel and ships, seemed to support their claims. Now, however, the situation is reversed. The shyness of the Japanese fleet in the presence of Task Force 58 is reminiscent of a war 350 years ago.
In 1591 the Japanese attacked Korea. Their land attacks were at first successful. The fleet was depended on to maintain the lines of supply after the army had extended itself in pursuit of the Koreans. The Korean fleet attacked the Japanese early one morning with almost equal numbers but unorthodox rig and tactics. They surprised the Japanese by using a smoke screen out of which emerged a queer vessel twice as large as any in the Japanese fleet, armed with cannon and constructed so that arrows and other missiles had no effect. With this ship the Japanese were beaten in this and another battle. Their campaign in Korea failed.
The Korean secret weapon was called "The Turtle," which animal it greatly resembled. It was the Korean Task Force 58 of 35 years ago.

TOUGH JOB
A WAR reporter's life may seem glamorous to somebody who reads the results comfortably at his own fireside, but most readers don't realize what he goes through to get and transmit the information. As Col. J. B. L. Lawrence, army public relations chief, observes:
"The war correspondent goes to the front armed only with pencil, notebook and typewriter. He stands side by side with the soldier, braving the dangers and sharing the same grim purpose. People may know of their writings and broadcasts, and even of their photographs, news reels and films, but they cannot know what the correspondents have braved to keep the people of the United States the best informed public in the world."
The boys who do this hard and essential work, almost as important in some ways as that of the fighting forces, don't expect medals for the job. It is enough for them to know when they've done a good day's work, and to get an occasional pat on the back from a boss some thousands of miles away.
"When you think of all the good men lost in this war," says a sad friend, "you just want to sit down and bawl." But that does no good.

Disposition of Pacific Islands Worries Writer
Isles Have Been Fought Over for Many Centuries
By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist
WASHINGTON—When those gentlemen (and ladies, too, I hope) sit down in their infinite wisdom about the peace table and write down the sentences that will make everybody love everybody else in the post-war world, what will be done about the Pacific Islands?
To whom among the nations will they be given? And from whom will they be taken in order to give them to whomsoever?
What I really mean is this—how, for example, can anybody, even a treaty writer, tell to whom New Guinea, and the Marshalls and Truk and the Mariana archipelago belong?
All of those spots of terra firma, the Pacific islands which, divided geographically, are known as Polynesia, Micronesia and Melanesia, have been fought and died over, discovered and re-discovered. They have been owned, lost and bartered by all shades of peoples since time immemorial.
Balboa and Magellan and dear old Captain Cook stopped in at most of the larger Pacific islands. After Spain lost an exploratory concern in the Pacific islands, the Dutch began to take a proprietary interest in the South Pacific.
The Dutch East Indies company was born after the Portuguese had been kicked out of their holdings. English Buccaneers, French conquerors, including Louis Antoine de Bougainville (a great explorer though he is mostly remembered by the Christmas plant and the historic island named for him) next romped over the Pacific islands.
When Americans first began to feel their sea legs—not long after the United States was born—American whalers and sealers roamed the Pacific and discovered many an island not before visited by white men.
White traders, missionaries, planters and whalers followed the last of the great Pacific explorers, Admiral Charles Wilkes, U. S. N. The

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Erudite Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia is the first man to get direct from the President's own lips the explanation as to why he did not support Vice President Wallace for renomination.
The explanation came about this way. After Arnall had put up a hard-fisted, never-surrender fight for Wallace at Chicago, and carried the entire Georgia delegation with him, ex-governor Talmadge and his friends began jibing Arnall about betting on the wrong horse. They put out the idea that he had been left holding the bag, that the President had told him that he was for Wallace (which he definitely did) and then double-crossed him.
The President heard about the Talmadge jibes and asked Arnall to drop in and see him. The Georgia Governor did so last week and received from the President direct this explanation of the whole Wallace fight at Chicago.
FDR said he had been for Wallace 100 percent, that Wallace had been his first candidate, just as he had told Governor Arnall several weeks before Chicago. However, the President continued, he had allowed Bob Hannigan, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and others associated with Hannigan, to sell him on the idea that Wallace had no political strength and couldn't make the grade in the convention. So the President, bowing to Hannigan's political judgment, gave him, together with Mayor Kelly and Ed Flynn, pretty much the green light to go ahead.
The President implied, without saying so in exactly these words, that if he had known how much strength Wallace had, he would not have yielded to Hannigan at all.
This explanation differs somewhat from the story of those who were on the inside at Chicago and participated in telephone calls between FDR and the party bosses. There was no doubt in their minds that the President, at that point in the fight, was 100 percent for Senator Truman and pulling wires for him. This, of course, was after Hannigan et al. had done their sales job.
Note—During the Chicago convention, Hannigan came to Governor Arnall, begged, pleaded that he switch the Georgia delegation to Truman. Arnall, who had heard Roosevelt express himself for Wallace several weeks before the convention replied: "Either the President is the biggest sap in the country or you are a liar. And I don't think the President is a sap." So Georgia didn't desert Wallace.
WHERE WAS WILLKIE?
Hard-hitting Republican Clarence Brown of Ohio was cross-questioning CIO's Sidney Hillman at a recent meeting of the House Campaign Expenditures Committee.
"You were on hand for the Democratic convention?" asked Brown.
"Yes, I happened to be in Chicago," grinned Hillman.
"You were there for the Democratic convention," Brown continued, "but were you in Chicago for the Republican convention?"
"Where was Willkie at the Republican convention?" shot back Hillman.

Third Haven

SYNOPSIS
A leading and popular resident of Talbot, sleepy little Chesapeake Bay village, is Mrs. Eunice Reynolds, elderly and unable to walk, but the possessor of young ideas. She has been dominated by her strong-willed granddaughter, LAURA, who lives with her. Mrs. Reynolds hires ANNE WILSON, personable young New Yorker, to be her nurse. Longtime friend of Laura is RUSSELL SMITH, conservative young attorney. The placidity of Russell's life is shattered by the arrival, after a long absence, of his outspoken, liberal brother.
YESTERDAY Anne still has not heard of the dislike Laura has taken to her.
CHAPTER NINE
ELEANOR BANCROFT watched Anne cutting the flowers in the garden of the inn and swallowed a lump in her throat. When Harry came out to open up the garage she went to him and whispered, "I can't tell her, Harry. I tried to and I can't. She wants to stay here. I don't know—and I don't care—why she wants to forget New York. But I'm sure it isn't anything important. You know how New Yorkers are."
His eyes twinkled. "I know now YOU are anyway."
Anne held up her basket for them to see. "Am I being very plucky?"
"We need much more than that," Eleanor cried. "You haven't begun to have enough."
After breakfast Anne packed her belongings and strolled around to Mrs. Reynolds' house, carrying only a little bag of toilet articles. Harry would bring the rest in the car, he said. She didn't realize he was prepared to bring or not bring as the occasion demanded. She felt very happy and stopped in at the Town Shoppe to get a piece of embroidery to work on. She liked the looks of the little place and the girl who ran it. A bustling little woman came over to her and shook hands eagerly.
"I'm sure you're Anne Wilson, I want to welcome you to Talbot and I hope you enjoy your stay here. I am Miss Withers."
Anne smiled. "I'm pleased to know you, Miss Withers. I think I saw you on this street yesterday Morris street, isn't it?"
Miss Withers beamed. "You are observing. Most girls aren't. Jane here will tell you that. Of course I saw you. You were talking to Eunice Reynolds on her porch. I've found of Eunice. We all are. And I'm glad you're going to take care of her. She needs a pretty face and a sweet voice around her. You'll do her a world of good."
"Thank you, Miss Withers. I'll try my best."
"Of course you'll wonder how I knew, but then I know everybody in Talbot and everything that happens. Everyone confides in me. If I can help in any way, don't hesitate to ask me."
Anne thanked the woman again, smiled at Jane, who seemed a bit embarrassed, and continued on up Morris street. She paused to look at a great mass of crepe myrtle growing at one side of a house. It reminded her of Savannah, except that here its beauty was more astonishing, more unexpected. Mrs. Reynolds' porch was only a few steps farther on. The front door stood open invitingly, but there was a screen door, of course. In answer to Anne's ring a voice called out cheerily:
"Come in, Anne Wilson. I've been waiting for you."
The girl went in to find the old lady sitting in the living room with both hands outstretched in cordial welcome. Anne put down her little bag and took them, her eyes shining with happiness.
"I hope I'm not too early. Mrs. Reynolds."
"You wouldn't have been too early if you had come at dawn, although on the whole it's better this way. Only why such a little bag? You look as if you were starting out for a day's swimming with one of those one-thread bathing suits girls wear."
Anne sat on the chair she was waved to. "Mr. Bancroft is bringing the rest of my things. A car later. The Bancrofts have been so kind to me, just as if I were a relative come to visit them."
"Or even better," added Mrs. Reynolds dryly. "I'm glad to see you didn't let my daughter's pert message upset you too much. You are going to need spunk around here."
Anne was puzzled. "I didn't get any message. Was there one for me?"
The old lady chuckled. "That's a good mark for Eleanor. By the way, do you scare easily? I don't mean ghosts, but can you stand up to people?"
It was a strange enough question. Anne smiled. "I don't quite understand. I have stood up to people, if that's what you mean. I'm not exactly a coward. I've only run away from one thing in my life."
"A man?"
"New York City. I don't want to see it or speak of it or hear of it again."
"As bad as that? Well, it's none of my business, not just yet, anyway. And I'm not going to be mysterious any more. My daughter—she's really my granddaughter, but sometimes she's older and more crotchety than I am well, she left a message that you were not to come here today. That I was going to use somebody else."
Anne rose slowly to her feet. "I'm sorry. I didn't get your message."
"Do you think that was MY message?"
"No, I thought you wanted me, and..."
"Good. That's settled. I do want you. But that old witch, Mrs. Slotta, in with me? Not while I've got a cane I can swing good and hard. Do you want to stay here?"
"Of course, but if it's trouble and..."
Mrs. Reynolds banged her cane loudly on a chair. "Answer me yes or no. Are you going to be my friend or aren't you? Can you stand up to my persnickety granddaughter, or can't you? Do you fight or run away? Yes or no?"
"Yes—I fight. I don't run away."
Anne made her decision and her jaw squared as she said it.
"Hurrah!" cried the old lady, and banged her cane again. A tall colored cook came in from the kitchen.
"Were you calling, Mrs. Reynolds?"
"No, I mean yes. Molly, this is Anne Wilson. She's going to take care of me and make me feel young again. She's here to lunch and every other meal. And like me, she enjoys good food. We want a sample of what you really can do."
The cook looked bewildered. Miss Laura said—
"Whatever Miss Laura said doesn't count. This is MY house and I intend running it until I'm wheeled out in a pine box. If Mrs. Slotta comes, it's your job to have enough banana splits on the steps so she'll stay away. We are not at home to Mrs. Slotta or any other of her vinegar-purses. And you slip home the first chance you get and put on a red dress, or a green one. I don't care which. But no black. Save that for my funeral!"
"Lord forbid!" cried Molly, throwing up her hands.
"Thank you. When Miss Wilson's bags come, put them up in her room. Miss Wilson and I are going for a walk. I expect the phone to ring, so I intend being out. If my daughter calls up, and I'm sure she will, tell her Miss Wilson is here and I am still boss of my own home. Can you remember all that?"
Molly gulped. "I'll try, Mrs. Reynolds. But Miss Laura said—"

Great Britain's mighty navy, senior service of the Empire and backbone of the defense against Nazi Germany, was launched on a sweeping blockade of Reich naval ports.
Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Uhl, 581 North Court street, were anxiously awaiting word from their son, Kenneth, who was then in Europe studying research work most energetic of the later traders were the Germans who tried their turn at gobbling the Spanish-owned Carolines and Marshalls. Of course, the Japanese maneuvered their way into the Pacific islands by hook or crook.
The success of Japanese maneuvering is going to prolong this fearful war in the Pacific. And when it's all done and the last American life is lost and the last wounded man is brought back to his own people—who is going to get the islands? What will all this shooting and killing have been done for? Maybe the iconoclasts are right—maybe war is a business, the biggest business of all businesses. And the stupidest!
THE MODERN SEA-GOING MAN has never met hard tack, though his teeth are better equipped to attack it than were the teeth of his ancestors. The modern sea-going man eats muffins and French toast and griddle cakes. His daily food reads like a party in honor of a visitor at Blair House, the nation's guest house.
Read a sample Navy menu and notice how your mouth waters: "Dinner—Cream of Tomato Soup, Roast Beef, Natural Gravy, Lyonnaise Potatoes, Buttered Cabbage, Carrot and Lettuce Salad, French Dressing, Banana Fritters with Orange Sauce, Whole Wheat Bread, Butter and Coffee." Another dinner—"Beef Broth with Barley, Braised Veal Cutlet, Tomato Sauce, Oven Browned Potatoes, Mixed Cooked Vegetable Salad, Cranberry and Orange Pie."
Imagine whipping up such meals as this for anywhere from 50 to 2,000 men when sailing across a coral sea a thousand miles from no man's land while a battle rages overhead and beneath your keel. The ships add fresh vegetables and fruit from marketing shore stations or food bases set up in advance of the ship's arrival.
I have been studying the U. S. Navy Cook Book. I have learned from it, among other useful things, how to make chocolate malted milk cream icing, French onion soup and good old navy bean soup. I have learned how to teach French dressing the spirit of unity and how to make a poached egg settle down, how to fin a fish. I have learned the iron contents of a dehydrated apple nugget—the best way to make a contrary man eat vegetables is to put them in a soup. You may learn these things, too, if you buy a Navy Cook Book at the Government Printing office. But don't forget when you are inspired by concise direction to stir up a little surprise for dinner that all recipes are "developed on the basis of 100 portions."

The Art of Fine Cookery

"THAT MAN there," said Dr. Adrian Gibbs, around the camp fire the other evening, pointing with his pipe stem at our guide who had just cooked six trout with particularly delicious skill, "does us gastronomes, as the oracles by aster and the oracles by flame."
Best Cooking
"I incline to the creed that the best cooking in the world is American. French and Mexican in the order named. In Peru today they are good too."
"It is not mere patriotism that makes me put American cooking at the head. In the first and last treatise ever to be written on gastronomy—Brillat-Savarin's Physiology of Taste—the author betrays the fact that he spent five of the most impressionable years of his life on these shores. 'During my sojourn in Hartford, in Connecticut,' he writes, 'I had the good fortune to shoot a wild turkey—and then he learned about turkey. On another page he goes into rapture on American chocolate. And his description of turtle soup at Little's Tavern in New York makes your saliva gush.'
"But if France learned about cooking from America, she became an apt pupil. France and America are the only countries I know where the cooking in towns outside the capital is better than in the capital."
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
E. L.: Can any harm come from the continued use of cocoa? They speak of cocoa leaves being an opiate. I began taking it to gain weight!
A.: Cocoa contains no opiate or narcotic drug. It is no more habit forming than coffee, its stimulating effect being due to a similar substance to caffeine, theobromine. It has a very high nutritive value, and if you are taking it to gain weight, you have a good means.
J. M. T.: What are the medicinal properties of sauerkraut juice?
A.: It is mildly laxative, it is rich in Vitamin C, and will prevent scurvy in children as well as orange juice (Dr. Rice—Archives of Pediatrics), on account of its content of lactic acid and lactic acid bacillus it is good for intestinal putrefaction and it is stimulating to the appetite.
F. P. A.:—How high can blood sugar rise in a glucose tolerance test?
Answer: The glucose tolerance test is conducted by obtaining a specimen of blood in the fasting state, then feeding the subject 100 grams of glucose flavored with lemon juice by mouth. Specimens of blood are secured at half hour, one, two and three hour intervals after the glucose is ingested. The curve normally goes up to 140 (mg. glucose per 100 cc. blood) at one hour and then drops so that it reaches 80 to 100 mg. at the three hour interval. Any increase in this indicates diabetes.

Nuptial Mass
Read At St.
Joseph's

At a nuptial high mass celebrated Monday at 9:30 a. m. in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Miss Anna Belle Carle, 158 Watt street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Carle of Circleville Route 2, and John R. Lake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lake, 517 Elm avenue, repeated their marriage vows after the Rev. Fr. Edward Reidy, in the double ring service of the church.

Music at the ceremony included "Ave Maria" at the offertory of the mass, and "On This Day, Oh Beautiful Mother", while the bride knelt at the statue of the Blessed Virgin.

For her wedding, the bride chose a formal wedding gown of white tulle, fashioned with a fitted bodice, sheer yoke finished with Chantilly lace which formed the sweetheart neckline; long, tight sleeves ending in points over the hands. The full skirt swept into a short train. Her finger-tip length veil fell from heart-shaped coronet. White pompons formed her corsage, and she carried the white prayerbook which had been carried by her grandmother. For something old, she wore a gold cross and chain, loaned by Mrs. Lake, the necklace being more than 125 years old. The bride carried also the pearl and gold linked rosary, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Joan Cook served as maid of honor and wore for the service a lovely gown of pink tulle, made with fitted bodice and sweetheart neckline outlined with a ruffle of self material. Ruffles also finished the three-quarter length sleeves. The extremely full skirt was floor length.

Mrs. Harold Binkley, cousin of the bride, and Miss Mary Hannah Irvine, served as bridesmaids. They were gowned in blue and carried arm bouquets of rose asters, of deeper shade than the flowers carried by the maid of honor.

Mrs. Binkley's frock was of blue sheer, with shirred waist and sweetheart neckline and short puff sleeves and full skirt; Miss Irvine's was blue net of similar styling. The three attendants wore silver miraculous medal necklaces, the gifts of the bride.

Lawrence Carle, brother of the bride, served as best man for Mr. Lake. Harold Binkley and Mark Howell seated the guests.

Immediately after the service, Mr. and Mrs. Carle, parents of the bride, entertained at a reception for 100 guests. Mrs. Carle received in brown crepe, trimmed with white, and used moss green and brown accessories. Her corsage was of white pompons. Mrs. Lake, the bridegroom's mother, was in black sponge crepe with coral trim. She used black and white accessories and wore a corsage of bronze chrysanthemums.

Asters decorated the home for the reception and gladioli were used at the altar of the church.

A three-tier cake, topped with miniature bride and bridegroom, centered the refreshment table that was lighted with candles in triple holders.

Guests were present at the wedding and reception from Chicago, Ill., Dayton, Columbus, Chillicothe, Sunbury, Delaware, and Lockbourne.

When the bride and bridegroom left after the reception, the new Mrs. Lake wore black tulle with black and white accessories for the trip to Chicago, Ill. She wore the corsage from her prayer book pinned at her shoulder. When they return, they will live at 935 South Washington street.

The bride is a 1940 graduate of Williamsport high school, of Office Training school, Columbus, and is employed at the AAA office.

Mr. Lake, was graduated in 1941 from Circleville high school and is employed at the Columbus Army Services Forces Depot.

LOCKBOURNE TOURNAMENT NOW WIDE OPEN AFFAIR

The race for the Lockbourne Army Air Base officers' round-robin tennis championship became a wide open affair today with the announcement that Lt. Melvin Lapman, leader and tourney favorite, left to attend the Special Service School at Washington and Lee College.

Up to the time of his departure, Lt. Lapman was making a run away race for the honors, winning all of his four matches in straight love sets.

Today, those considered most likely to take down the championship are Lt. Col. Ben B. Mabson, Jr., CWO Osmond Burkuloo, and Capt. Urbane L. Gibson. This threesome has suffered but one defeat and that at the hands of Lt. Lapman.

Play will be resumed on Thursday night at Franklin Park.

Bucks Pose For Cameramen
Today Then Start Hard Work Wednesday

COLUMBUS, Sept. 5 — Ohio State university's Buckeye footballers, preparing for a September 30 opening game date with the University of Missouri, took time off from Fall practice today to pose in their favorite gridiron pin-ups for newsreel and newspaper cameramen from throughout the midwest.

Coach Carroll C. Widdoes, heading the Buck coaching staff in the absence of Naval Lt. Paul Brown, turned the 60-man squad over to the Fourth Estate bright and early this morning and the picture-taking ordeal wasn't expected to be completed much before noon.

After that—well, things won't be quite as easy for the Bucks. For example, they're a training table date at noon and at 3 p. m. in the practice date with Messrs. Widdoes, Bixler, Godfrey, et al., after that. And after that? Why, they go home and go to bed and rest up for tomorrow which promises to be even tougher.

Over the week end the Buck coaching staff added Eddie Bruckner, a standout guard with the 1941 Buckeyes. Bruckner, as an assistant line coach, will supervise the first team tackles. Widdoes said in announcing the appointment. In 1942 Bruckner served as an assistant freshman coach.

Simultaneously, Widdoes announced that Cecil Souders, of Bucyrus, the Bucks' sensational end last season, may be available for some service this Fall. Cy recently passed a naval physical exam but hasn't been called as yet. It's just possible, Widdoes said, that he will get to see action in one or more games before he is ordered to report for active duty.

Also back in harness is Les Horvath, star back with the 1942 Bucks. Horvath, still in uniform as an ASTP dental corpsman, is expected to shed the khaki shortly with the discontinuance of the ASTP dental corps. Barring an immediate call by his Cleveland draft board, Horvath will be available for another full year of service in the Ohio State backfield.

If Widdoes can hang on to both Souders and Horvath for another month, he will have 13 lettermen to throw at the opposition. Other monogram winners on the grounds include Jack Dugger, of Canton, at end; Tackles Bill Willis, of Columbus, Russ Thomas, of Charleston, W. Va., and Jim Marker, of Columbus; Guards Bill Hackett, of London, George Neff, of Bellaire, and Paul Maltinsky, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Center Gordon Appleby, of Massillon; Quarterback Matt Brown, of Canton; Halfbacks Bill Lonjack, of Cleveland, and Paul Dugger, of Middleton.

Dugger, Appleby, Willis, Thomas, Brown and Davis were regulars last year.

BIRDS LOSE TWO TO HENS; DROP TO FIFTH PLACE

By International News Service
Hopes of the Columbus Red Birds, defending Little World Series champions and a pre-season favorite to cop the 1944 American Association pennant, dropped to a new season low today as the Birds absorbed a double licking at the hands of the Toledo Mud Hens, 12-8 and 5-4.

The double reversal, coupled with St. Paul's twin triumph over Minneapolis, dropped the Birds into fifth place—a full game behind the fourth-place Apostles and 17½ games behind league leading Milwaukee.

With the season scheduled to end September 10, the Birds' work for the remainder of the week was well cut out. They must regain their fourth place spot in order to defend their little world series title.

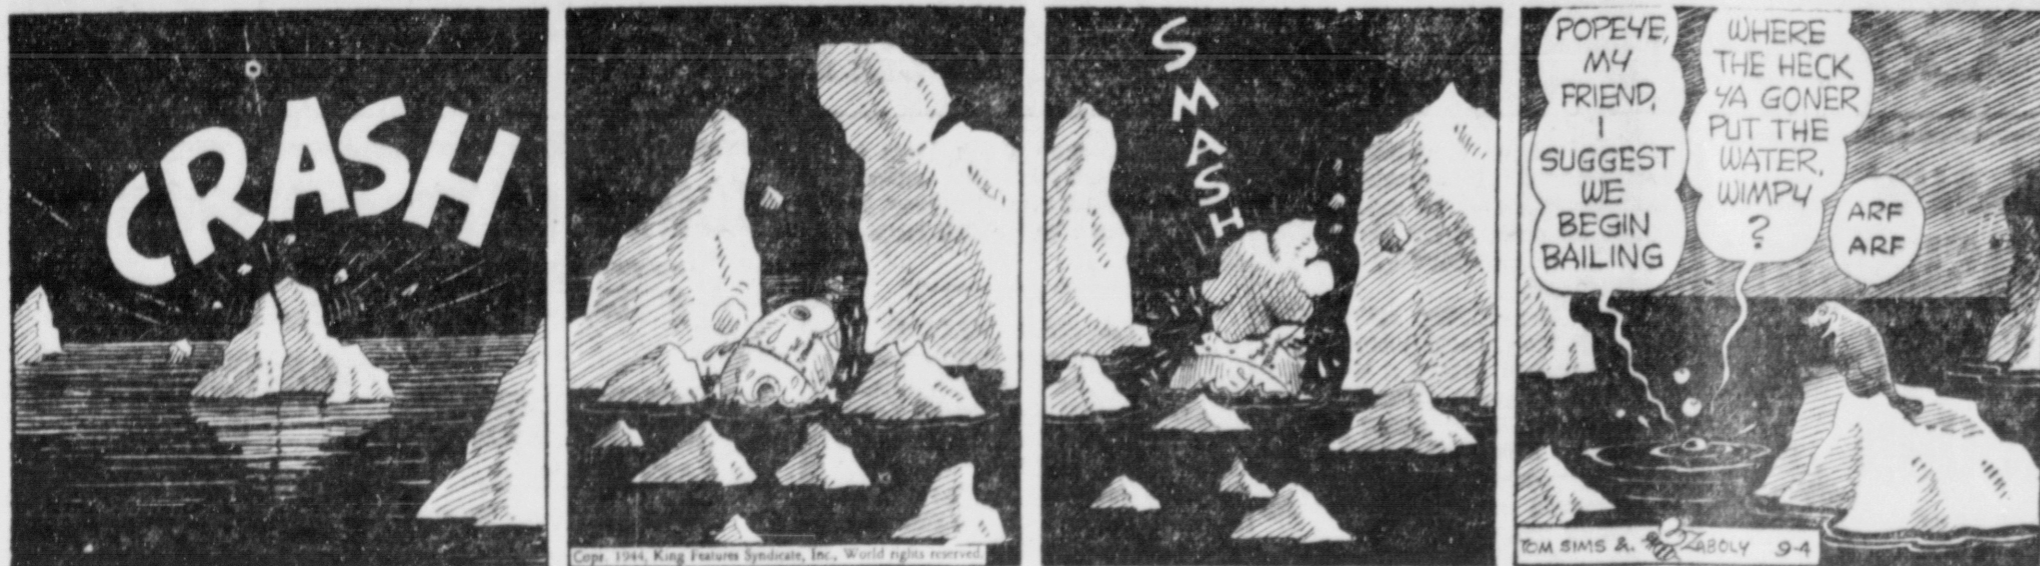

St. Paul's double win at the expense of the Millers was by scores of 12-1 and 11-10. The Saints won the opener handily on Bill Webb's seven-hit pitching and capped the nightcap in 10 innings with Loy Camp, the winning pitcher, plating the winning run with a timely single.

Milwaukee took both ends of a doubleheader with the lowly Kansas City Blues by scores of 8-5 and 8-6.

A scheduled doubleheader between Indianapolis and Louisville was postponed because of rain.

Congressman Brown said no more.

CRIME OF POLLING SOLDIERS

The Justice department had a delicate crime problem tossed in its lap when Edgar Brown of the National Negro Congress recently issued a statement that he had polled one million Negro servicemen, and that around 80 percent of them would vote Republican. In so doing, Brown violated the soldier-vote act, which makes it a criminal offense merely to ask any serviceman how he will vote.

It is now up to the Justice Department to enforce the law which a coalition of Republicans and anti-Roosevelt Democrats pushed through in order to make it as tough as possible for the soldier vote to be exploited by the Administration.

Some Republicans on Capitol Hill indicated shocked amazement that they had passed a bill making it a criminal offense to ask a soldier how he intended to vote. Senator Austin of Vermont, Republican leader, told newsmen: "I didn't know we voted for anything like that."

He indicated that the Justice Department should be lenient in enforcement of the law. However, Justice Department officials say that the law is the law, and once Congress passes it, they have no choice. If they attempt to be lenient with any law, they are likely to have a bunch of irate congressmen jumping on their necks.

Meanwhile, as long as the law remains on the statute books, it is a criminal offense even for a father to ask his soldier son how he intends to vote in November.
